

REFLECTION

TAMIL SELVAM A/L SUBAS
85875

PRESIDENT
THE LIFE FLAME

As a president of my theatre company The life flame to make sure everything runs smoothly and effectively. Providing clear direction on our goals, supervising production schedules, controlling budgets, and making sure each member is aware of their own responsibilities are some of my main responsibilities. In order to ensure that everyone can effectively contribute to our shared goals, I work to create an environment that is both disciplined and flexible enough to foster creativity. Product development is a key focus for us, particularly with our initiative to create and sell button badges. These badges not only serve as a unique product to generate revenue but also promote our theatre company. The designs will be children-themed, reflecting our commitment to making theatre accessible and enjoyable for all ages. Before launching any project, I prioritize conducting thorough surveys to gauge the feasibility and potential success of our plans, understanding our audience and their preferences to make informed decisions. Our button badges' kid-themed design called for ingenuity and thoughtful consideration. I challenge our group to develop and produce designs that will appeal to our younger audience by being interesting, vibrant, and eye-catching. Along with aiding in product development, this technique gives team members a sense of pride and ownership. It is essential that I keep the lines of communication open with my teammates. We make sure that everyone is on the same page by routinely discussing everything from innovative ideas to practical matters. This cooperative method facilitates prompt and efficient problem solutions.

REFLECTION

After each rehearsal, I hold small meetings to discuss progress and address any immediate concerns. These sessions are crucial for continuous improvement and provide a platform for feedback and new ideas. Additionally, assisting in decorating our booth and solving any technical issues that arise is part of my commitment to hands-on leadership. Being involved in every aspect of our operations helps build a cohesive and supportive team environment. One of my key responsibilities is making decisions that impact the entire team, such as setting up payment systems and ensuring that each teammate receives their due compensation. Transparent and fair financial practices are essential for maintaining trust and motivation within the team. I am also committed to creating a friendly and inclusive organization where everyone feels free to speak and share their ideas. In our team, no one holds a higher or lower position; we are all equal, contributing our unique skills and perspectives to achieve our common goals. Finally Handling last-minute changes or issues is another critical aspect of my role. I take it upon myself to resolve these issues quickly and efficiently, sharing the details with my teammates to keep everyone informed. If a teammate encounters a problem, such as insufficient funds for button badges, I step in to cover the shortfall, prioritizing the product that will represent our company. Encouraging my teammates to bring their own product ideas, such as food items like jelly balls and coffee, diversifies our offerings and empowers team members to contribute their creativity and entrepreneurial spirit. I also take an active role in assisting our media team by creating videos and posters to promote our activities and products. Pushing the media team to share our content widely ensures that our message reaches a broad audience and maximizes our impact. Overall, my role as the president of our theatre company involves strategic planning, creative development, and fostering a supportive team environment. By focusing on clear communication, equitable decision-making, and collaborative efforts, I aim to lead our company to success while ensuring that every member feels valued and empowered.